GUIDELINES FOR USE IN AOD AND MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

Thank you for using the My Health: Self-Assessment Form. This information will help you to support tāngata whaiora to use My Health to enhance health and wellbeing. You may not be an expert in physical health, but your support will assist others to upskill and engage in their own health care.

Ensuring People are Equally Well

People experiencing serious mental health and addiction issues have higher rates of morbidity (health issues) and earlier mortality. Equally Well is a national initiative that encourages organisations to collaborate to reduce these health inequities (see bit.ly/equallywellphysical for more details).

The My Health Resource

The My Health: Self-Assessment Form has been developed to help people improve their access to healthcare and is an Equally Well initiative. This resource is based on the NEAMI Health Prompt (2012), and an adapted version developed by Comcare (NZ) in 2014. My Health includes updated New Zealand health guidelines; health issues relevant to people with addiction challenges; and a user-friendly design.

Aims of My Health

My Health aims to promote conversations about physical health within mental health and addiction services. It builds knowledge about health issues, personalises health priorities, and encourages people to take control of their own health. This resource aims to improve physical health through improved self-management, earlier and regular access to physical health checks, and improved engagement with health services when needed.

GUIDELINES FOR USE IN AOD AND MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

Using My Health

Self-Autonomy

The focus of My Health is to meet the needs of people who use services and to maintain their self-determination, so it should always be optional and led by their preferences.

Flexibility

My Health is designed to be easy to use and flexible enough to fit a range of service settings. People can choose which section to start on, and complete as much as they want to.

Supporting Treatment or Recovery Plans

My Health can be used as part of clinical assessment and treatment planning or a Wellness Recovery Action Plan (WRAP). Find out from the service user which information from their My Health form they want recorded in service notes.

A Self-Help Tool

People can also complete My Health on their own or with whānau. Offering to discuss this experience at the next visit, and whether they need further support or information, can improve outcomes.

Building a Relationship

Taking time to build a relationship first makes it easier to discuss health concerns, particularly in relation to more sensitive issues such as weight or sexual health. Being culturally responsive, working motivationally and trauma-informed are also important for health discussions.

Tick One (✓) for Each Statement:

The response options are designed to be affirming and constructive. Ticking 'Yes', provides a list of personal achievements and positive self-care. Ticking 'Not my priority' indicates these things aren't an issue or there are more important areas to focus on. Ticking 'I'd like to focus on this' provides personal priorities that can be turned into goals in the final section.

Reviewing Progress

Reviewing goals can affirm achievements and help to address any challenges in achieving goals. Health priorities and progress can be reviewed as frequently as is useful for the person involved. Reviews can be useful when a goal is achieved, to identify if there are other priorities. Scheduled reviews can also be beneficial to support progress (e.g., every 6 months). Reviews can be done with the same staff member, or with different people who provide support e.g. a peer worker, GP, clinician, nurse or support person.
